

Dear FCC,

I was recently informed that you want to localise radio programming. While this may seem like a good idea, I'd like to express that this would also impact those of us who enjoy national programming. I am a regular listener and supporter of KLove Radio (in CO, 91.1 FM) KLove can only produce a strong translator to cities in which they have listener supported funding. Colorado is a state that is to my knowledge fully funded. To deny these listeners their choice in programs would be a shame. Although there is a local Christian radio station, which I listen to as well, they have varied programming. The local station broadcasts sermons, childrens stories, talk shows, as well as music. While KLove plays music 24/7. I think if you look closely at their current listener supported funding, you will find there is a great number of people across the nation who support this programming.

Please keep local programs like Klove as a priority across the air-waves!

Thanks,
Christina Gallegos
KLove supporter and listener
